Superbas Win from Giants by Taking Chances on Bases

Pfeffer Keeps McGraw's Men Under His Thumb at Critical Points in Game.

BROOKLYN TRIUMPHS BY A 3 TO 0 SCORE

Largest Crowd of Season Sees Sharply Played Diamond Battle.

McCart Catcher FINELY FOR VICTORY

Wilbert Robinson's Policy of Forcing the Issue Turns the Tide of Contest.

By HEYWOOD BROWN.

"Take a chance" is the baseball catchword which Wilbert Robinson has dinned into the ears and drilled into the heads of the Superbas. By taking chances the Brooklyn team captured a game from the Giants at the Polo Grounds yesterday by a score of 3 to 0.

The largest crowd of the season, fully 35,000 fans, saw the game, and although the rosters from Brooklyn were in the minority they easily outscored the partisans of McGraw. The fans from the wrong side of the bridge, of course, are not so victory hardened as the followers of the Giants.

The first run scored by Brooklyn was directly due to a daring piece of base running by Cutshaw, and the Superbas continued to force the issue in the succeeding innings even though their attacks were repulsed again and again.

Every player who got to first lingered only a moment before scudding for second at the command of Wilbert Robinson.

Chief Meyers was throwing superbly. Five Superbas raised the dust about second as they leaped feet foremost to reach the bag, but each time as the smoke cleared away Robert Emmie could be seen with one finger raised in token of a newly made putout.

But luck, it would so ardently, must be won. In the sixth Meyers was goaded into making an error, and two runs were scored to hearten Edward Pfeffer, late of Grand Rapids, who held the Giants scoreless, though often sorely pressed. He was wild, but allowed only four hits.

Pfeffer is a serious and suspicious young man who relies a great deal on a curve ball. He worked hard yesterday, for, in addition to pitching nine innings he walked a mile or more to get his signals.

Evidently Pfeffer had little faith in the system of finger cipher employed by his catcher. Every time a New York man reached second the pitcher became obsessed with the idea that the baserunner was seeking to steal the signals and flash them to the batter.

Accordingly Pfeffer left the box before each ball pitched and walked halfway to first in order to get the signals at an angle which would make it impossible for any member of the New York team to watch.

McCart caught a superb game for Brooklyn, making several captures of difficult fouls and holding the pitcher to earth when he seemed to be worried by the Giants.

Jeff Tressau began in the box for New York, but stepped aside to let Mike Donlin take his turn at bat in the eighth. Donlin did not use the gold weapon presented to him by the fans of New York on the opening day, and it is just as well that he did not, for he met a fast curve squarely and drove it up against the left field wall for a two-base hit.

Brooklyn showed what manner of game it was to play in the very first inning. With one man out Cutshaw drew a base on balls. Jake Daubert swung hard enough to send the ball far away, but he only knocked the sphere and it rolled slowly down the third base line. Cutshaw might have been well content to get to second, but he never slackened speed and carried his sprint safely into third by virtue of a slide that took him under the arm of Milton Stock. Zach Wheat sent the ball far out to Burns in left and Cutshaw scored a run which later loomed up as high as the cost of living.

Opportunity, the well known knocker, kept up a steady rat-a-tat-tat, calling for the Giants, but there was nobody at home. Bescher, by virtue of a base on balls, a balk by Pfeffer and an outfield fly by Burns, worked his way around to third in the first inning with only one man out. Red Smith rose to the occasion, some four feet, and snatching a high bouncer from Fletcher with one hand cut off Bescher at the plate.

But in the fourth came the greatest disappointment for the New York fans. Bescher again worked Pfeffer for a pass and on a beautifully executed hit and run Burns put the ball just out of the reach of Dick Egan. Burns did some surprising base running on his own account and made second by a long head-first slide, while Bescher reached third.

With only a sacrifice fly needed to tie the score Fletcher hit a pop fly to Smith. Then up came Larry Doyle and raised a Woolworthian foul. McCart hovered underneath as the ball twirled about in its flight to deceive him. He made the catch, but only by falling on his face.

Murphy filled the bases by walking, but Murray, too, hit for attitude and McCart caught his foul.

Brooklyn clinched the game in the sixth. With two out Cutshaw singled and stole second. The fourth ball to Daubert was a wild pitch and Cutshaw got to third. Daubert on the next ball pitched bluffed a steal of second and Meyers, equally deceptive, bluffed a throw. The Indian carried the bluff too far for the ball slipped from his hand and fell behind him, while Daubert trotted to second.

Wheat brought both runners home with a double, which Burns could not quite reach.

Fletcher was hit to start the ninth and Doyle doubled into right, but the runners were left on second and third when the next three batters fled out.

CAMBRIDGE TO TRY NEXT YEAR

Inspired by Oxford's Success, Cantabrians Will Run in 1915 Penn Relays.

Cambridge University has accepted an invitation to compete at the University of Pennsylvania relays next year. Macintosh, the president of the Cambridge Varsity Athletic Club, has written a letter to the athletic authorities of the University of Pennsylvania stating that he would send a team.

The Englishmen were asked to compete in the four-mile relay for American championship, which was won by the Oxford team, but declined the invitation because they did not have four-milers that could compare favorably with Oxford.

Cambridge has several good quarter-milers, and if four athletes can be developed to run a mile in 4 minutes 30 seconds it will enter a squad in the four-mile championship, won by Oxford this year.

It also was said that Oxford probably would send another team.

THREE HOME RUNS BY THE PHILLIES

Lober, Magee and Luderus Pole Out Circuit Drives in Beating the Boston Braves.

Boston, May 2.—Three home runs by Philadelphia batters gave their team an easy victory over Boston to-day, the score being 6 to 2.

Lober and Magee made circuit drives in the first inning off Perdue's delivery, while Luderus cracked another of Perdue's shots in the fourth inning into extreme right field for one of the longest hits ever made on the local grounds.

Lober was home batsman of the day, getting a home run, two doubles and a single in four times at bat.

INDIANS THRILL THE NEWARK FANS

Rally in Ninth Brings Two Runs and Noses Out the Buffalo Team.

The Indians rallied in the ninth inning yesterday afternoon to snatch victory from Buffalo at Newark, winning by a score of 7 to 6. It was the first hairbreadth finish of the season, and it had the crowd up in the air.

There was one out when the two runs were scored. Callaghan popped up a fly, then Tooley followed with a single to right. Collins drove a hot one on a bound over Vaughn's head. This was followed by a double steal by Foley and Collins.

Here the Buffalo infield played in, but it was fatal. My Myers hit the ball so that it took a high bound, which Roach could just touch with the tips of his fingers, and as it rolled to left field Tooley and Collins crossed the plate.

The game was marked by heavy hitting. Eddie Zimmerman, the Newark captain, getting a home run drive to center in the eighth inning.

Ray Mow, the Newark shortstop, was knocked out while walking from the field at the end of the third inning, and had to retire from the game. He was hit behind the right ear by a ball thrown from the Buffalo bench which had been intended for practice. He has a slight concussion of the brain.

Charles H. Ebbetts, Jr., president of the Newark club, witnessed the incident, and said that he intended to protest to President Barrow of the league against the promiscuous throwing of the ball between innings.

Hamilton Pitcher Strikes Out Twenty

NINE FIRSTS FOR CORNELL

Defeats Michigan Track Team—Speiden Lowers a Mark.

Detroit, May 2.—Cornell's well-balanced track team defeated Michigan here this afternoon by 74.1 points to 41.5. Cornell took nine firsts and Michigan won three.

Speiden, of Cornell, after a heart-breaking finish with Murphy, of Michigan, broke the Michigan half-mile record of 1:57.4, held by "Horsepower" Ramey, of Michigan. Speiden's time was 1:57.25.

Jansen, of Michigan, and Caldwell, of Cornell, ran a dead heat in the 440-yard dash. Michigan's weakness in the field events made victory easy for Cornell.

TAYLOR RETAINS TITLE

108-Pound Wrestling Champion Conquers Florentino.

George Taylor, of the National Turn Verein, vanquished S. Florentino, of the Boys' Club, for the 108-pound title at the Metropolitan wrestling championships, which were held at the Boys' Club, last night. He was the only champion to defend his title.

Florentino forced the issue at the beginning and after a minute's tussle he tossed the Newark lad to the mat. He worked over him for several minutes and secured two good holds on him, but Taylor wriggled out of the grips with apparent ease. After four minutes Taylor worked himself on top and got a croch and body hold, and after a minute and ten seconds forced his opponent's shoulders to the mat.

N. G. Pendleton, Jr., of the New York Athletic Club, won the 115-pound championship by defeating Maurice Nelson, of the Harlem Young Men's Christian Association. After 7 minutes and 15 seconds Pendleton pinned his foe's shoulders to the canvas with a body and arm hold.

Chicago Feds Fail to Stop the Rebels

Chicago, May 2.—Joe Tinker used six men in a vain effort to stop the Pittsburgh Feds to-day. Barger was invincible most of the time, while Pink was battled off the slide early in the game and three other local pitchers were hit hard, the visitors winning by a score of 7 to 4.

Accidents Mar First Trial of The Resolute

Cup Defender, However, Has Initial Spin on Narragansett Bay.

Warwick Bay, and then the yacht wore around. She carried her sail well, with a comparatively slight angle, although some of the puffs ran up to fifteen or eighteen knots. Her crew handled the sheets like veterans. The Resolute ran down the bay with her boom to starboard until she was off the Portsmouth coal pier. Then her skipper put her about and started back for Bristol.

Those aboard the yacht to-day, besides Mr. Herreshoff and Mr. Adams, were Robert W. Emmons, 2d, the manager; John Parkinson, Jr., George Nichols, Sidney Herreshoff, J. B. L. Herreshoff, Frank Chase, the rigger, and A. C. W. Hathaway, the sailmaker.

The work of bending the Resolute's mainsail occupied the greater part of the forenoon. The foot of the sail was hooked to the boom, instead of being released through the eyeholes. The jaws of the gaff were above the spreaders when the sail was hoisted, thus necessitating the unbending of the parrel below the spreaders and releasing it after the spreaders had been passed.

The feature of the yacht's rig when the sails were up was the unusual lightness of the standing rigging. Compared with the mast, spars and sails, the shrouds, forestay and backstays looked more like gray threads than galvanized wire rope.

Eleven years ago last week the large cup yacht Reliance spread her sails for the first time in Bristol Bay and began her unusually successful career. For the first trial that year the Reliance had a fine southwest breeze and beat down the bay to Brenton's Reef Lightship, a distance of more than twenty miles, before returning to Bristol.

Robert E. Tod's new schooner, the Katoara, was to have raced against the Resolute yesterday, but could not be gotten ready in time.

It was announced yesterday that George M. Pynchon, who is at the head of the syndicate of New York, Philadelphia and Boston yachtsmen who are financing the construction of the cup defense yacht, Defiance, will be at the helm of that craft during all her trial races. If she is selected to defend the cup, it is said that he will steer the yacht in the international race.

While the yacht was beating up the bay off Bristol Ferry upon her return, one of the peak halyard blocks was carried away, dropping the gaff and forcing the battens out of their pockets in the leach of the mainsail. The yacht made her way back to the harbor and anchored.

This was the second accident of the day, the first being the breaking of the chain that raises and lowers the centerboard. A sailor let it slip and the board dropped so far that it hung only by its pin. A diver and a lighter had to be brought from Fall River to recover and sling the board with a new chain. This delayed the sail trial until 2:30 in the afternoon. Both accidents are regarded as affording valuable lessons, showing weakness in the centerboard chain and also in the aluminum shell and steel sheave of the block.

The tender Cape Cod was close under the sloop's lee as she fled away on the starboard tack to begin her trial, and Captain Herreshoff was forced to give her a sharp luff to avoid a collision. He cleared the steamer by barely ten feet. Heading up the harbor, the Resolute bore off through the west passage into East Narragansett Bay. Sheets were still well trimmed, and for a few minutes the yacht had her lee rail awash. Once up into the bay, she headed across Rocky Point, and, after Captain Herreshoff had sailed a mile Mr. Adams took the wheel.

A couple of short tacks were made up the bay.

RACE THROUGH CITY ANOTHER TRIUMPH FOR KOLEHMAINEN

Remarkable Finn Repeats Victory of 1913 and Smashes Records.

REACHES CITY HALL GOAL YARDS AHEAD

Betters His Previous Time for Modified Marathon Contest.

STROBINO SECOND AND SMITH THIRD AT END

Morris, Darky Runner, Tangoes Across the Line as Band Plays Dance Tune.

Hannes Kolehmainen, of Finland, world's champion long distance runner, romped to easy victory in the modified Marathon of "The Evening Mail" through the city streets yesterday afternoon while more than 400,000 enthusiastic spectators cheered him on.

Loping along with a rhythmic stride, he finished the 13 miles and 200 yards in the wonderful time of 1 hour 9 minutes and 15 of a second. An idea of the speed at which the victor picked his way over the rough course may be gleaned from the fact that he broke Jim Crowley's American record of 1:12:49.2-5 for 13 miles, made on the elder track at Celtic Park on November 14, 1909.

Gaston Strobino, the gritty little runner who was the first American to finish in the Marathon run in the Olympic games at Stockholm, was second, some 600 yards or more behind the Finn, timed in 1:11:28, while following him were Harry J. Smith, the national two-mile champion, who was about 200 yards back; Willie Kyrönen, of the Kaleva A. C.; George Holden, of the Yonkers Y. M. C. A.; and A. Morris, of the Smart Set A. C. Smith, badly used up, finished in 1:13:55.1-5, with Kyrönen only 2.4-5 seconds behind. Kyrönen ran a great race when it is considered that he had only a week to prepare himself for the event. Morris, to show how fresh he was, tried a few tango steps and hesitation dips when he crossed the line. The band was playing "Too Much Mustard," and crowd applauded the happy dandy as he made for the dressing room.

Not even in former years has the marvellous Finn showed such a burst of speed. He smashed seven records established by himself last year over the old course, and from 55th st. and Fifth ave., where the pack turned to take the new route along Seventh ave. to 14th st., then east to Fifth ave. and Washington Square, thence to Lafayette Place and south to the City Hall, he created a new record. And any man who could run in anything like record time over these streets, torn up, rough, rutty and in chaotic condition generally, was almost superhuman. The asphalt pavement was freshly oiled in many places, and the shoes of the athletes sank in deeply. It required much precious energy to release them. Furthermore, racing over cobblestones and temporary pavements of rough planks was not conducive to best results. Many of the boys finished with their feet painfully blistered.

Yet through all this the smiling Finnlander wended his way, threading in and out of automobiles and trucks and forcing himself through the lanes of mudily cheering spectators. He forged to the front at the flash of the gun, fired by Police Commissioner Arthur Woods, and stayed there. Once, in the first half mile, Harry J. Smith took the front and set on winning, leaving the rest of the pack to follow. But Kolehmainen soon hopped ahead and stayed there. Smith, however, gave him battle, and, racing shoulder to shoulder, the men passed the one mile in 4:27. The course was downhill and the runners moved easily.

Reaching along on Jerome ave., the field strung out in the distance, winding its sinuous way like some mythical serpent. The color scheme, worked out by the various colored uniforms, added a touch of barbaric brilliancy to the scene. Kolehmainen was first to set foot on the viaduct over the Harlem River, with Smith, already laboring, some twenty yards in the rear. More than two thousand spectators were gathered at this point, and the Finn was cheered to the echo. Running well within himself, his matchless stride showed not a sign of faltering. Kolehmainen went along, increasing his lead with every bound. It was seen that, barring accidents, he could not lose.

Passing down Seventh ave. to 10th st. and turning east to Fifth ave., he blazed the trail and, making the turn to the south at 10th st., was fully three blocks in front. From then on it was a clear cut case of Kolehmainen first and the field nowhere. He simply kept at his task, and every mile found him further in front than the preceding one.
